The proposed clean up plan does not do enough to remove toxic sediment via dredging.

The plan relies too much on "monitored natural recovery."

The plan should include a specific date by which the Fish Consumption Advisory can be lifted. This should not be open-ended. The ongoing upstream pollution above the Portland Superfund Site is minuscule and should not be used as an excuse to avoid setting a specific date.

Those who are responsible for the pollution must be made to pay to clean it up. The costs should be passed on to the industries responsible. Tax payers and the City are responsible only for a small portion of the toxic pollution.
